The “Dear Colleague Letter and Resource Guide on ADHD”

My son has ADHD and the school he went to tried to help but other learning differences still caused him trouble and he failed 8th grade. He's now repeating it in a school for children with learning differences. I know how important it is that ADHD is recognized as something that is real and those kids so afflicted need special attention and help if they are to achieve all they could. These kids are smart. Their brains just work differently than the normal and they should be given the help they need.

Thank you.
